

The Financial Market Council participates in the 2023 edition of the IOSCO World Investor Week for the development of financial education

The Financial Market Council (CMF) takes part, for the fourth consecutive year, in the celebration of the World Investor Week.

Regulatory authorities and financial organizations from five continents participate in the 2023 edition of this important international event, which reflects its growing momentum. The event is conducted under the auspices of the International Organization of Securities Commissions (IOSCO), which brings together the majority of the world's financial market regulators.

The choice of the Financial Market Council to take part again in this international event attests its renewed commitment to promoting financial education among the general public and is in line with its legal mission to protect savings invested in securities and exchange-traded financial products.

This year, the CMF has chosen to focus its communication on the presentation of a new financial activity namely «Crowdfunding in investment in securities» by publishing on its website a guideline file devoted to this subject which is highly timely and topical for the Tunisian capital market.

<https://www.cmf.tn/le-crowdfunding>

Similarly and on the occasion of this event, the CMF will make presentations to students from various Tunisian universities in order to promote a better understanding of financial markets and products, as well as the missions and working methodology of the national securities regulator.